

For Immediate Release:

Contact: Mary Senger
Marketing Manager
marys@madentec.com
(780) 450-8926

Edmonton AB – October 1, 2006 - Madentec Limited, a world leading supplier of universal computer access solutions for people with disabilities, today announced the release of Discover Envoy for Mac OS X. Envoy, written natively for Mac OS X, is the latest generation of the famed Discover software that has been helping people with physical disabilities use a computer for nearly two decades.

Discover Envoy is mouse and keyboard replacement software that enables people with motor disabilities to independently control their computer. With Envoy, users can access their computer completely by either switch scanning or pointing with alternative hardware interfaces such as IntelliSwitch or TrackerPro.

Envoy software is compatible with all Mac OS X applications, whether or not they have access built-in themselves. Popular computer programs such as Safari, Mail, iTunes, Pages, Microsoft Office, and Keynote are now fully accessible to everyone. Discover Envoy software comes with a constantly increasing number of general and specialized on-screen keyboard Setups to accommodate all age ranges and circumstances. Innovative tabbed Setups provide seamless integration between commonly-used commands and more application-specific functions.

The Mouse scanning Setup in Envoy.

Envoy is compatible with all switch and on-screen Setups from previous versions of Discover.

Randy Marsden, President and CEO of Madentec, explains, “Discover has been a critical part of many user’s computing experience for over 15 years. We knew it was important to allow them to retain all of their previous Setup content. So we not only made it possible, we made it easy. Just open an older Setup, and Envoy will automatically convert it.”

Marsden continues, “Envoy is the culmination of over 5 years of research and development. It is a complete re-write from the ground up, based on feedback from many focus groups and user feedback. Mac users are going to appreciate its simple elegance, yet amazing power under the hood”.

Patti Rea, Industry Consultant and trainer, states, “Envoy takes individual access to a whole new level! It is so well planned, organized and improved. This will certainly provide independence and ease of use to an entire new group of users!”

A hands-on lab will be offered on Friday Oct 20th (8:00-10:30 am) at the Annual Closing the Gap conference which is being held in Minneapolis from Oct 18-21. This is an excellent opportunity to see learn about Envoy and try it in person. Breakfast is included.

About Madentec Limited

Madentec Limited is committed to being the premier supplier of universal access solutions for people with disabilities worldwide. Scanning access and alternative keyboard access is provided by using Discover software with IntelliSwitch hardware. Tracker products provide a 100% hands free solution for accessing and controlling a computer or communication device through the use of head movement. These products are ideally suited to people with severe physical disabilities including cerebral palsy, quadriplegia, multiple sclerosis, ALS and muscular dystrophy.